The Women's Environment & Development Organization (WEDO) is a global women's advocacy organization that promotes women's leadership, gender equality, and environmental sustainability. WEDO works at the nexus of women, environment, and development to ensure that women's voices are heard in decisions that affect their lives and the future of our planet. WEDO represents women's organizations; environmental, development, and human rights organizations; national and global governments; and intergovernmental organizations, including the United Nations, to advance women's participation in decision-making processes and promote sustainable development.
